Movie Censorship Not Repealed; 48-hour-a-week Law For Women and One Aimed at Quack Doctors Fail; Walker Avoids Senate Vote on "Dry" Bill.

By Telegrams to The Governor.
Albany, N. Y., April 11. With its closing hours marked by confusion and turmoil such as never existed before, the 1924 session of the Legislature adjourned sine die today.

When the rising sun peeped over the eastern hills, both houses were still grinding away. The assembly

The senate adjourned at 8:30 nearly 24 hours after the first of the day's important work.

With the exception of short recesses, both houses had been in session since 11 o'clock yesterday morning. That time legislative observers joined the throng.

The final hours of the assembly were marked by the defeat of the Walker bill repealing the state income tax, the federal income tax, the state and federal corporation law and the state stock law providing for a 18-hour week for women and minors in industry. Three times the bill was defeated by a vote of 10 to 9. The state corporation law in the last 18 hours of the session. The last vote on the repealer was down to defeat by 61 to 1, and 75 against the bill.

Senator Walker's repeal bill was passed in the senate during the early morning hours and it just goes to the assembly where the rules committee, of which Speaker Stachelin is chairman, is released to report it.

Minority Leader: He then moved to have the rules committee discharged from further consideration of the bill.

Insurance Spokesman Tachibana held a recent meeting of the rules committee in the postroom and it was decided to report out the Mastick bill. Minority Leader Bloch then moved to discharge rules committee from further consideration of the measure.

Two more Republicans voted with the Democrats in favor of the Mack bill but it was defeated 74 to 70. Two more votes would have passed the bill. Seventy-six votes are necessary in the house to put through a measure. The Republicans who

One of the surprises of the closing hours of the session was the defeat of the assembly of the Carolinians, represented with the assembly, making the New York city common, a transit bill. It now goes to Governor Smith who is expected to veto it within a few days.

When the quick bill was reported out by the rule committee, Assemblyman Porter, Republican of Essex, Landerdale, Jacksonville and other places he visited. He was thus enabled to attend a Keweenaw luncheon each week and keep up his attendance record during the period covered by the contest which is now running in this district.

as reported in the Senate, during the early hours today it was speedily referred to codes committee by Senator Weaver, the Democratic leader. The bill was drafted by a committee of the District Attorneys' association and was virtually identical with the Mullin-Gage enforcement.

BATTLE 14-FOOT SHARK IN COCKPIT OF VESSEL

Fishermen Have Thrilling Experience After Harpooning Monster Off Palm Beach, Fla.

Details of a thrilling fight between four men and a 600-pound shark in the cockpit of a 50-foot fishing boat became known recently at Palm Beach, Fla., for the first time. The principals in the fight were T. Coleman Dupont of Wilmington; his son, Frank; Louis G. Kaufman of New York and Capt. T. E. Newell of Palm Beach, skipper of the launch Ripple.

The party went out just before noon. They cast anchor, three miles off the coast, near Boynton. A half a dozen kingfish had been hauled in when a shark was seen swimming near the boat. Captain Newell obtained a harpoon and the monster drew near the boat drove the spear with force through its back. The entire party then took a hand in hauling the shark aboard, despite the efforts of the shark to free itself.

Once aboard the craft, the shark renewed its fight, as retreat to the cabin was made impossible for the men because of the swings of the monster's tail, while a rough sea kept the boat rolling about.

Kaufman saw a hatchet in a corner of the cockpit and went for it. There followed a series of attacks upon the shark. It was only after several minutes that the shark, deprived of its natural element and weak from exertion, became quiet, when the huge tail was secured and the monster was killed.

The party returned to port with their catch, which was 14 feet long.

Experiments Show Egg Yolks Cure for Rickets

The marked value of the yolks of eggs as a preventive for rickets is pointed out in a publication of the department of health of the City of New York, which describes the experiments leading up to the conclusions of the bureau of child hygiene, which will shortly begin to administer egg yolks to babies between three and nine months of age at two of the baby health stations.

The egg yolk mixture, a palatable preparation made with orange sirup, will be supplied free through the courtesy of the Association to Improve the Condition of the Poor. Dr. Alfred F. Hess will co-operate in supervising the work, which is being undertaken on account of a study of his for the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Hess has shown that egg yolk not only can protect young rats from rickets, but it can also cure them of rickets.

"In view of the high content of fat soluble vitamin in egg yolk and the close association in nature of this vitamin with the antirachitic factor, as best exemplified in cod liver oil," says Dr. Hess, "it appeared worth while to test the potency of the yolk in relation to its prophylactic and curative value in rickets."

New York Rat Brigade Kills 21,590 in 1923

New York's most neglected servants have come into the limelight at last. Rat bites did it.

The twenty-six men who compose the rat-trapping squad of the board of health are engaged in a battle to stem the rate wave. Ten children were bitten by rats in the first fifteen days of this year. All of the children were attacked while asleep. And some east-siders and some of the inhabitants of Greenwich village have been driven from their homes at night by rodents.

Hardly anyone outside the twenty-six men who comprise it knew that New York during 1923 trapped 21,590 rodents in the city.

The rats are taken to the health department's laboratory, where they are tested to see if they have brought in bubonic plague or other diseases. Nineteen complaints of rat bite were made last year from June 28 to December 14. It is noticeable that sixteen of them were in the cases of children, mostly babies unable to protect themselves.

Inventor Gave Away Plans for Largest Gun

Discouraged over rejection by the United States, French and Argentine governments of his plans for a siege gun, which he said would throw a shell 105 miles, John G. Conception, found dead in his room at New Bedford, Mass., mailed the plans as a gift to the British government three weeks before he died.

According to Conception's sister, Mrs. Marie K. Barrades, after the inventor started work on his plans in 1918 he was sent to jail for six months on suspicion of being a spy. The plans, when completed, were forwarded in turn to Washington, the Argentine government and the French government, being returned in each case as "not practical."

Fifty-five years after he began his business career as a peddler, Jefferson Wall of St. Louis, Mo., died, leaving a fortune of $600,000. Wall was only twelve years old when he went from house to house selling trinkets.

Raises Rabbits for Prey

Large numbers of rabbits are being placed on islands near Wrangel, Alaska, by the government. The rabbits are to provide food for valuable fur-bearing animals on the islands.

From the standpoint of the harvester, the banana is ripe when it is green, says Nature Magazine. In order that it may withstand the hardships of travel, the fruit is gathered before it begins to take on the tinge of yellow.

TODAY WE CELEBRATE

CHARLES E. HUGHES
Secretary of State of the United States will pass his 62nd milestone today, having been born April 11, 1862 at Glens Falls, N. Y. Mr. Hughes, who came so near to being elected president that some bets were being paid when the western states returns coming in showed Woodrow Wilson elected, is the son of a Baptist minister, and of Welsh stock. He was a sickly child and carefully reared, from boyhood he was always an omnivorous reader and very studious, so much so that at eleven he had absorbed all the knowledge that the public schools had to offer, when he spent several years studying under his father, as he was too young for college. At fourteen he entered Madison (now Colgate) University where he remained until 1878, when he entered Brown University. From 1881 to 1883 he studied law at Columbia University, then taught mathematics at Delaware Academy. His father had hopes to make a Baptist minister of him and when he chose the law as a profession was keenly disappointed. At 26, while a struggling lawyer, he married Miss Antoinette Carter, daughter of one of his employers.

After opening law offices of his own in New York his insurance and gas investigations brought him fame and carried him to the Governorship, the Supreme Court and almost to the White House.

MARIE FRANCES DUMESNIL

A celebrated tragic actress, was born at Paris in 1737 and remained popular until the moment of her retirement in 1775. She died in 1803 having preserved her intellectual powers to the last. She displayed her talents most strikingly in Queens and lofty characters, especially in the parts of Medea, Clytemnestra, Athaliah and Agrippina.

When she exerted her full powers she surpassed all her theatrical contemporaries in exciting emotions of pity and of terror.

ANGLO-AMERICAN TREATY

Sixteen years ago today April 11, 1908, a treaty was signed by representatives of the United States and Great Britain providing for the more complete definition and demarcation of the international boundary between Canada and the Republic, also providing for a commission to settle for all time the disputes and controversies that had been carried on for nearly a century. Another treaty signed on the same date related to the fisheries question, long a subject of heated discussion.

REPUDIATION OF A LAW.

If there were no purchasers of bootleggers' goods, there would be no bootleggers. There must be buying, or there can be no sales. Therefore it stands to reason that the purchasers who support this business are morally involved, whether legally liable or not. Bootleggers who are caught and punished must often think of this, but it seems not to have occurred to certain patrons of two "society bootleggers" of Hartford, Conn., who gave their testimony and thus convicted the offenders, apparently not anticipating the plain speech Judge Malbie addressed to them. Supporters of the bootlegging trade everywhere have reason to be interested in Judge Malbie's remarks, which were, in part, as follows:

These men here are charged, and have pleaded guilty, to breaking the laws of their country, not in any accidental way, not in any outburst of passion, but coldly and consciously, in order to get a portion of the results of an illegal traffic; and they have done it to get your money; and not only have they broken the laws of their country in this respect, but the trade which they represent drags after it every manner of violence up to murder, smuggling, piracy, and worst of all, bribery and corruption which reaches out to every man that tries to enforce these particular laws of his country; and the trail of these crimes leads right to the door of you who have come here and told that you have played your part in it. It is your money which causes that, and you who are supposed to represent property, respectability and social position—what are you, after all, but participants in crime, instigators of crime? That's what you are; and you set yourselves up and say, "I will choose what laws I will obey." Well, if you can choose what laws you will obey, any other man can choose what laws he will obey; and if you do that, what becomes of your country? American citizens, some of you with creditable military records, digging at the very vitals of your country. There is many a man who sits in that pen over there who is more deserving at the hands of the court and the public than you are.

The answer of those who support, and expect to continue, to support the bootlegging trade can be readily foreseen. They will deny that they are participants in and instigators of "crime," that they do not "choose what laws they will obey, and that they merely ignore a single unjust and tyrannical law which must and will become a dead letter. They will hold that this one law can not be enforced because the sentiment of the majority is against it, that this majority has never been given a chance to roll up a vote against it, that in any case it is outside the province of law to ordain what the people shall drink or not drink, and that to resist such tyranny is an inalienable human right. This is the kind of talk one hears very often, and our grandfathers heard and joined in the same sort of talk in regard to the fugitive slave law, which was merely a fuller statement of a clause in the Constitution itself. Ordinarily good Americans hold that a law must be obeyed until it is repealed, but, just as the anti-slavery folk held that there was one exception to a good rule in their day, so multitudes of anti-prohibitionists hold that again there is one exception to the same rule. For this reason, therefore, it is likely that Judge Malbie's impressive words, while delighting one section of the public, will largely fall upon deaf ears so far as the other section is concerned.

We are apt to think that an aeroplane, once aloft, can encounter no obstructions, but two army lieutenants who recently made a record flight from Buffalo to Mitchell Field tell of some minutes of fearful hazards while maneuvering their plane through a flock of hundreds of migrating Canadian geese. One or more of these caught in the propeller might have brought serious results.

Society in Hartford, Conn., is said to be much excited because a bootlegger sentenced to nine months in prison gave the names of "best people" whom he served and the judge warned that the next time they also would be put on trial under a Connecticut statute rendering liable anybody who assists, aids or abets in the commission of a crime. Of course all states have such a statute, but as yet it seems not to have been definitely determined whether those who buy liquor from bootleggers are actually participants in the meaning of the law. At any rate only the bootlegger has been punished and neither the "best people" nor the plain people who keep him in business have been brought into court.

The Oil City, Pa., Blizzard prints the following: "Wanted, a temporary husband. Young girl 22 years of age, attractive, must marry within a week. Will pay man who marries her well, but he must leave her alone after the ceremony. Prefer gentleman of good breeding, but one who does not expect to live longer than a week. Apply L. T. E. Blizzard office." Young men have served in this capacity before—in novels—but in this case the requirement that the purchased bridegroom must "not expect to live longer than a week" may give pause to the most venturesome and clip the wings of what is doubtless a practical joke.

TRYING TO INDUCE SLEEP.

I have often wondered if any statistician has ever gathered together all the different suggestions for inducing sleep.

Sleep is just as necessary as food, and the continuous loss of it injures the system.

But as I've mentioned before, the loss of a couple of hours, two or three times a week, will not hurt you.

Now what about these sleep suggestions?

You know a number of them; counting the sheep jumping over a wall, counting your fingers over one at a time slowly and methodically, hot pad to the feet, deep breathing, and many more. I'm not going to suggest anything new, but I just want to outline the principle underlying the successful wooing of sleep.

The principle is "Don't let your brain work."

How can you prevent it working? Simply by slowly drawing the blood away to another part of the body.

And that is the idea underlying the methods used so successfully in a sawmill.

With one person, a hot water bottle or electric pad is placed at his feet, and he is told to rest with his arms and legs slightly bent; not on the stretch.

Another is given a bowl of hot soup, and advised to relax.

For still another, a set of light exercises is prescribed, such as raising on the toes a number of times, or squatting on the heels. These exercises are taken to the point of slight exhaustion.

I believe you see the idea.

With the hot water bag or pad to the feet, the circulation is stimulated sufficiently to draw the blood gently from the brain. With the hot milk or soup in the stomach, the blood soaks in an increased amount to the digestive apparatus.

You know how, after a substantial meal, you feel heavy, sleepy in fact. It is because the blood is putting its efforts into manufacturing juices for digestion, and in the actual muscular action of the stomach.

That is the reason that business men and students often take just a light lunch at noon, as a heavy meal makes them heavy or mentally dull some time afterwards.

And the exercise, if not taken too vigorously, draws the blood into the calf and thigh muscles and thus away from the brain.

My suggestion is to use the one that fits your particular case or age.

If you have a poor poor circulation, and are getting up in years, the hot pad, or the hot milk or soup, is indicated.

If you are young the light exercise of raising on your toes, or squatting on your heels, is your best method.

ROAD BUILDING

HIGHWAY SIDEWALKS PREVENT ACCIDENTS

The increase in automobile traffic of late years has brought among others one very serious problem, the protection of pedestrians who have to travel along the public highways.

Recent figures compiled by a large life insurance company, covering casualties on highways of a certain state for the heaviest traffic season, showed that out of 427 deaths in automobile accidents, 47 per cent of them were of persons who were walking along public highways and were struck by motorists.

As a result of the alarming increase in accidents of this type, authorities have instituted campaigns of various kinds to reduce casualties, they have broadcast rules which pedestrians should follow when forced to travel along the highways. People who have been warned to carry lanterns after dark and to walk on the left side of the road so that they will see oncoming vehicles in time to get out of the way.

But all these precautions cannot eliminate these accidents altogether; they can only reduce the number.

Realizing this, state, county and city authorities in various parts of the country are now building concrete sidewalks along the highways in the more heavily traveled regions to safeguard pedestrians. And this plan as shown in the illustration is really the only one which can prevent accidents to pedestrians along the highways.

"Widen, Repair," 1924's Sign for Road Builders

Highway builders of America have agreed on two vital planks in the 1924 road improvement platform.

The first will safeguard the annual investment of more than $1,000,000,000 for highway construction and extension by the establishment of definite and systematic maintenance and repair.

The second will make this huge investment pay record dividends by raising degree of improvement justified by its traffic.

In some cases this will mean doubling the width of existing arteries; in others the straightening of all dangerous curves and the construction of "bypasses" to improve traffic conditions and eliminate danger.

Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, first emphasized both of these needs in outlining his basic principles of highway management and financing during the coming year. He urged all states, where the first or "backbone" system of pavements is nearly complete, to concentrate now on building the big channels up to their proper carrying capacity, and to set aside a certain part of all road revenue for the annual repair and maintenance of its built roads.

Improved Highways Will Help Roadside Markets

The rapid spread of a good idea is noted in the marvellous growth of the roadside market plan in the United States. It is stated by a bureau which has studied the situation that fully 500,000 wayside farm markets will be in successful operation during the summer of 1924 in this country. With the coming of the auto into common usefulness, with the opening of good roads leading from the city and town back to the farm, and with the exposure of the extortion prevailing on the way between the producer and the consumer, a lot of consumers and producers have reached the sensible conclusion that they had better get together for their own mutual well-being and do their commodity dickering direct.

Assist Better Highways

The President of the United States is so much interested in good roads that he has appeared in a movie film which is good road propaganda, sponsored by Henry Ford. The hero of the little two-reeler is a country boy, who is presented by the President with a scholarship for a prize essay. Later the boy becomes a civil engineer, devoting his life to the building of better roads in order to make his section of the country a better place in which to live.

C. E. President To Speak Here

Wednesday evening, April 23, the Hon. Frederick A. Wallis of New York City will speak at the First Dutch Church on the "Challenge of the Hour." Mr. Wallis was former commissioner of immigration under President Wilson at Ellis Island and was instrumental in alleviating much hardship among the immigrants, in successfully handling the great influx of aliens and in adopting more expeditious methods in coping with the vast numbers of immigrants that came to our shores.

Mr. Wallis is at present commissioner of correction in New York City, with many affiliations in police circles—gives a goodly portion of his time and talent to religious and philanthropic work and is also a man of wide business activities. Mr. Wallis is president of the New York State Christian Endeavor Union and comes under the auspices of the United Country C. E. Union. A conference will be held in the chapel from 4:00 to 5:30 p. m.; fellowship supper at 5:30 p. m., and evening rally at 8:00 o'clock in the main auditorium of the church. A most cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend. Aside from an offering, there will be no admission charged and no pledges solicited.

A SUBJECT NEAR TO MILADY'S HEART

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

When the silhouette changes, lingerie must needs change with it. When the mode is tailored one must be consistent from the heart out, but when one may subscribe to the tailored idea one minute and be contradictory the next, lingerie may be whatever we at the moment like it to be.

The newer notes are sounded in the fitted waistline and the chemisiers from further evidence of our susceptibility to boyish influences. One obviously associates these details with underthings that are severely plain and one finds oneself thinking of the monogram as the only decoration permissible. The monogram has attained such infinite variety that one sometimes hardly recognizes it as such. A decorative motif in the spirit of a monogram is called a monogram although it be as unlettered as an ideogram.

Other talking points in circles which are aflutter with preparations for such things as will be part of the modern trousseau have to do with the relative values of pajamas and nightgowns. Amusing attempts at gingham pajamas deserve comment, for the newest models are anything but unobtrusive. The louder the material the more peaceful the slumber, seems to be the idea.

ARMY FLYERS TEST OUT NEW DEVICES

Aviators Guided Above Clouds by Instruments.

Dayton, Ohio.—Lieut. Eugene Barkdale and Bradley Jones, who made the record non-stop flight of 8 hours 45 minutes for the 375 miles from McCook field, Dayton, Ohio, to Mitchell field at Minnola recently, made their return trip in the army DeHavilland navigation plane.

Mr. Jones is navigator in the flight. He is instrument engineer at McCook field and has devoted much time to the perfection of instruments which will make long-distance flying safer and more accurate.

Mr. Jones said that the flight record was of secondary importance.

Called Device Perfect.

"The real object of the trip was to test on a long flight our two new instruments, the earth inductor compass and the flight indicator," said Mr. Jones. "These instruments have been in process of improvement and testing for about a year by the army aviation staff and they are now deemed satisfactorily perfect to be made for general use in the government aviation service. The only thing lacking is an appropriation to make them."

"The first 450 miles of the journey was above the clouds. That was just what we wanted for the instrument test so as to be cut off from landmarks, such as rivers or railroads. We rose above the clouds at once after leaving Dayton. We practically did not see the land again until after crossing the Susquehanna river in Pennsylvania."

"The purpose of the flight indicator is to show the pilot whether he is on a level course. In making a perfect spiral or turn there is no loss of balance, but it is difficult to tell whether the plane is skidding or slipping off of the true balance except under extreme conditions. The flight indicator shows the pilot whether he is on the true balance or not. It is worked on the gyroscopic principle. The instrument is about five inches in height by 1 1/2 inches wide and fixed to the dashboard. At the top is a needle which turns to the left and right, showing the direction level. Below that is a glass tube containing a steel ball which acts to the side toward which the plane is tipping."

Compass Aids Pilot.

"Below the tube is an indicator to show the angle of the downward or upward flight."

The earth inductor compass, which has also been tried out for several months, was used for the first time in a long flight in the recent trip. It is placed on the tail of the machine to avoid magnetic attraction of the motor and is connected by wires to an indicator on the pilot's dashboard. The compass enables the aviator to keep a straight course without observing landmarks and Mr. Jones said its value was clearly proved on the trip from Dayton as after 450 miles the plane was only eight miles off its exact course when it reached the Susquehanna.

Mr. Jones said that a third instrument, a sextant arranged to give a correct artificial horizon so that the exact location of the plane may be known, similar to the taking of latitude and longitude, also was tested on the flight. The aviator, according to Mr. Jones, never sees the natural horizon, due to the haze and topographical conditions. The aviator sextant is not yet satisfactorily perfected.

Many Spanish Prisoners Liberated by Old Secret

Lisbon.—So many political prisoners have escaped recently from the fortress of St. Julian, on the Tagus river, that the place impresses a visitor as being deserted. Eleven men made a successful exit a few days ago, whereupon an investigation was made to find out why those, who thought prison life irksome found it so easy to slip away.

Outside of the fact that guards probably were bribed the authorities learned that some years ago a prisoner escaped by cutting a hole in a wall and digging a tunnel to a point outside the prison. The wall was filled up by a bricklayer among the prisoners. This man, possessed of imagination, stopped the hole with thin boards which he covered with plaster and announced a finished job. Subsequently he was freed, but he waited until certain of his friends were in confinement in the same fortress and then smuggled in a letter telling them the secret of the thin boards, which he alone knew.

OFFERS TO BURN OR STEAL AUTOS

New Type of Criminal Now
Operating in Kansas.

A type of criminal has just appeared in Kansas. He is a professional at getting rid of motorcars in order to collect the insurance for the owner of the car. All he wants to know is whether the owner wants his car to disappear and whether the owner has $100 in cash that he is willing to contribute to seeing that the car does disappear.

There is no doubt of men being hired in Kansas to get rid of cars by burning or theft or by sinking them in rivers. But E. E. Scott, state fire marshal, has no record of any other man who seems to have made a profession simply of getting rid of motorcars in any way the owner desired. The first report on him came from Hays, Kan. The same man is known to have been in at least half a dozen towns of the state in the last month. He is about thirty years of age, well dressed and appears to be a young business man, suave, aggressive and a good talker.

How He Does His Work.

In some way he obtains a list of "prospects." His prospects are men who own motorcars that are from one to two years old where the amount of insurance carried is still quite high compared with the actual cost of the car. The insurance companies have a standard rate of depreciation for all cars. The first visit of the man to a prospect is to find out if the car owner might be interested in a new car and the suggestion is made that the owner visit some of the motorcar dealers and ascertain how much he could get for his old car in exchange for a new one. He does not offer to sell any car and frankly admits that he is not a car dealer but tells the owner that he will have a proposition to make in a few days.

Reveals His Proposition.

When he returns to the owner he is told about what would be offered for the old car in exchange for a new model, either of the same make or of another brand. In some instances the owners find that they can get more money to exchange the old car for a new one of the same make than to trade for another brand. But they like the other brand better for some reason and prefer to buy it.

"They offer you $500 for your car," says the visitor to the motorcar owner. "You have an insurance policy for $1,000 on that car. If it should be burned today or should be stolen the insurance companies would pay you $850 to $900 for your old car. Give me $100 cash and I will get rid of your old car for you. The insurance company will pay you cash and you can buy any car you like and will not have to make any trades. You will get more money after paying me a hundred dollars than if you traded, and you can deal wherever you want to."

Guarantees No Risk.

The man is willing to guarantee that the car owner takes no risk. He is given a choice of two methods. One is by burning. The man has told several prospects that he would guarantee the fire to be so good that only the identification numbers would be left. "The job will be so good that the insurance company will not try to 'repair' the car," he offers. Or he will simply steal the car. This takes longer to get a settlement, as the car must be missing 60 days before the insurance companies are required to pay the loss.

When the car owner did not look with favor upon the proposal and did not want to join in the crime, the nerve of the visitor is shown by the fact that he brought forth a little loose-leaf memorandum book and asked for the names and addresses of friends who might be interested in his proposition.

It is known that the man called upon nine different men in Hays with his proposition in a single day. In every case he got them interested in getting a new car and did not disclose his plans until the second visit. At Salina, Ellsworth and Lincoln he called upon several in each place.

Prehistoric Skeleton Found in Side of Cliff

A huge skeleton, believed to be that of a prehistoric human being, has been discovered in the Iron River country, south of Lewiston, Idaho, by two members of the state highway department who have brought their find to Lewiston. The lower jaw and vertebrae will be sent to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C., for examination as to the probable date of existence.

The bones were found in the side of a cliff at a depth estimated to be 50 feet. Nearly the entire skeleton was recovered, the excavators proceeding with more care after determining that the find might prove to be of scientific value.

Measuring more than eight feet in height and possessing numerous strange features, the skeleton has aroused widespread interest. Three physicians who examined it pronounced it to be that of a woman.

Better that the person was of a herbivorous race has been expressed, owing to the peculiar formation of the jaws and teeth. Both the upper and lower jaws have only ten teeth each and all are intact.

Opening chorus, Grange; Talk on Seeds, Mr. Gray, of G. L. F. sold; Mrs. R. A. Young; sketch, Grange people from Flatbush. This sketch portrayed the inexperienced doctor with a purchased diploma "dealing" serious cases, when an older doctor calls for advice and exposes the ignorance of the young man. This was very well given and showed careful preparation. Sketch, Roger Krough, Newspaper clippings of interest to Grangers, exposing several ludicrous happenings to their fellow members, were read. This was followed by a solo, "That's a Lot of Bunk," the singer having adapted local members to its various sections. A fitting climax was the novelty dancing, for which Master Roger is well known.

New Paltz Will Spend $2,000 on June Pageant

The participation of New Paltz in the Tercentenary Celebration of the Settling of New Netherlands by the Walloons, which will extend through many of the Eastern states, is beginning to arouse the interest which a celebration in that important village naturally would create, and preliminary action by the residents of the village and town already shows their own wakefulness to a realization of what other places anticipate from the men and women who are fortunate enough to be privileged to claim descent from the original settlers. The feeling of pride is shared by those whose association and connection with the town is of later date, and the general movement to make New Paltz's celebration a matter of present-day history is making rapid progress.

A meeting of the finance committee of the celebration was held Monday evening in the Memorial Library at New Paltz. After Mr. Van den Berg, principal of the Normal School, had explained something of the history of the Pageant-at-New Paltz idea, the seventeen members of the finance committee present unanimously voted to put across a financing proposition that will assure adequate funds for the celebration provided they meet with the response to which the promulgators of this really enormous but worthwhile undertaking are entitled.

It is proposed to secure a guarantee fund of $2,000. Not all of this amount will be immediately available. The money is to be subscribed in the form of certificates of guarantee in denomination of $10 each. Each subscriber will pay in cash one half of this amount and the other half will stand as a deferred payment, or limited liability, against the holder of each certificate of guarantee. In this way the Pageant-at-New Paltz committee will have an immediately available working capital of $1,000 with which to begin the multifarious preparations for the New Paltz Pageant day in June.

It is astonishing that so pretentious a program as the Pageant-at-New Paltz calls for, can be put on so cheaply. It is due first of all to the ready response of several citizens. The New Paltz committee will speak its appreciation of them at a later time. In the second place New Paltz is blessed by its Normal school whose facilities are devoted to this pageant work. And in the third place New Paltz has among its public spirited citizens those fully capable of conducting the pageant and thus the committee is saved a substantial sum in the very beginning.

The unanimity with which New Paltz views the divergence of purposes and opinions displayed at other places among other groups where pageants are contemplated, and the unanimity that marks each constructive step forward in the building of the pageant, together with the confidence and enthusiasm displayed by the members of the finance committee in the launching of their $2,000 campaign sets a high-water mark in community spirit that other localities may well seek to emulate.

The Pageant-at-New Paltz idea is to be a reality. It is going to be an artistic success. It will be historically true. It will be a wonderful advertisement of the village. Because of the unusual advantage New Paltz has in its possession of the Normal school it can accomplish more for less money than other places less fortunately situated. If New Paltz people appreciate where they live, it is not going to be hard to sell the Pageant-at-New Paltz idea. How completely the village is entering into the Pageant-at-New Paltz idea is shown by the personnel of the finance committee, which is as follows: D. J. Gaffney, A. E. Jansen, Mrs. L. H. DuBois, Bruyn Hasbrouck, E. C. Elmore, P. J. LeFevre, H. G. Gregory, J. N. Vanderlyn, A. P. LeFevre, Mrs. D. A. Hasbrouck, Elting Harp, Joseph Connolly, Ella MacLaury, C. L. A doctor who had taken up as his specialty the treatment of skin diseases was asked by a friend how he happened to select that branch of medicine.

Ask Your Husband

If you want to know how a man feels when his wife's personal appearance compares unfavorably with that of other women—ask your husband. Unless he's too timid, he'll tell you he even notices their hands.

To avoid having red, rough and coarse looking hands, a woman must avoid using common household soaps which irritate the skin. She must be as careful about the kind of household soap she uses as she is about her toilet soap.

Thousands of intelligent, careful women who realize this, insist upon Kirkman's Soap for all their household and laundry uses.

THEY know that Kirkman's is as harmless to the hands as is the most exquisite toilet soap and, being free from irritating lye, will not injure the most delicate fabrics.

It is made of the purest and finest materials. It contains absolutely no adulterants such as starch, talc or water-glass, which have no cleansing value.

And with these merits, it is a most thorough cleanser.

For the sake of your hands insist upon Kirkman's Soap.

YOUR HANDS WILL BE GRATEFUL

Maybe some of us didn't look upon her views very lightly . . . it was to laugh!

My dear friend, I am still laughing . . . not at your product, but because I am able to. I am telling you and the world at large, "Eat Kellogg's Krumbled Bran!" It should be called "Constipation's worst enemy." I owe you my heartfelt gratitude. I can talk, and whenever the opportunity presents itself, my mouth is always full of bran—Kellogg's Krumbled. ### NORTHERN LIGHTS MYSTERY SOLVED

Savant Makes Green Line Like Aurora Borealis.

London.—Until now there has been no satisfactory explanation for the phenomenon known as the aurora borealis or the northern lights. For a long time they were regarded as the spectrum of a hypothetical gas, a tenuous mixture of hydrogen and helium, which was assumed to exist in the upper atmosphere. This gas was called geocoronium because the spectrum bore a close resemblance to the spectrum of the sun's corona. In the winter of 1912 Lars Bergard, professor of physics at the University of Christiania, made a special photographic investigation into the northern lights. He came to the conclusion that the pale blue and violet rays were due to nitrogen that was being ionized by electric rays emitted by the sun. But the spectrum also had a darker green line for which he was unable to account. Subsidy by Norway. About a year ago he again took up his investigations and received a subsidy from the Norwegian government which enabled him to carry out some very elaborate and expensive research. He succeeded in identifying at least thirty out of thirty-five lines in the spectrum as being due to nitrogen, so that the geocoronium theory could be abandoned. He found that the green line reached its greatest intensity nearest the earth, but its true nature remained a mystery. As he could not conceive that nitrogen gas of sufficient density could exist at such a height as to produce a luminosity so brilliant as the aurora borealis, he came to the conclusion that the nitrogen was not present in the form of a gas, but in the form of a fine dust made up of infinitesimally minute crystalline particles that were kept suspended by electric charges. The temperature one or two hundred miles above the surface of the earth approaches the absolute zero—that is to say —273 degrees C. In such a temperature tenuous nitrogen would condense into crystals such as those imagined by Bergard. Went to Leyden. To find confirmation of his tentative assumptions, Bergard tried to reproduce artificially the conditions on which they were based. He went to Leyden and worked in the famous laboratory of the Dutch scientist, Heike Kamerlingh Onnes, a winner of the Nobel prize, who in the year 1908 succeeded in liquefying helium at a temperature of —271.95 degrees C. Nitrogen freezes at —210 degrees C. With the help of liquid hydrogen Bergard was able to reach this temperature, and produced a thin plate of solid nitrogen. He subjected this plate to cathode rays of varying swiftness, and found that with a certain swiftness the spectrum was identical with that of the northern lights. Even the green line, which may now be taken as characteristic of the solid nitrogen spectrum, was present. It would therefore seem that the mystery of the northern lights has been solved at last.

Kentuckian Loses Two Long Races With Death

Harlan, Ky.—Half way across a continent and back again in a losing race with death on both occasions was the experience within a few days of C. W. Williams, prominent business man of Harlan. When Mrs. Herbert Mitchell, Williams' sister, lay at the point of death in Chicago, he received a message calling him there, and started to her at once. He reached Chicago a few hours after Mrs. Mitchell had died. Williams returned home and was resting from his hard trip and attendant sorrow when he received a message that his father, W. E. Williams of Lebanon, Va., was critically ill. Williams at once set out for his father's bedside, but a second vain trip resulted, the patient having succumbed a few hours before his son arrived. In the meantime, at Caveport, this county, Pauline Williams, a niece of Mr. Williams, had been burned to death. The three bereavements occurred within five days.

Rooster Injures Owner

York, Pa.—Frank Delaney, editor of the Poultry Press and widely known as an exhibitor of poultry, was injured in an attack made upon him by a big rooster. As he entered one of his breeding pens the bird, a Langshan cock, weighing 14 pounds, rushed upon him and gave battle. The fight lasted for some time, but the rooster was finally overpowered and killed.

Cattle Slaughtered in War on Disease

Salem, Ore.—W. H. Lytle, state veterinarian, returned home recently from California, where he went recently to assist in the fight against the hoof-and-mouth disease. Doctor Lytle said conditions have improved materially and that the disease has been confined to a few districts. Doctor Lytle brought with him to Salem a large number of photographs showing how entire herds were slaughtered and buried to avoid spread of the disease. The financial loss to live stock raisers was serious, Doctor Lytle said.

Radioactive Rocks

Rocks found on mountains in Oceania are said to throw off a light that will cause extreme irritation to the human skin. This, scientists believe, may be caused from a radioactive mineral imbedded there.

INVENTS ELECTRIC PHOTOGRAPH DEVICE

Engineer's Odd Machine Is Called Klydonograph.

New York.—Photographs of electrical disturbances can be made in twenty billionths of a second, it was announced. Such photographs can be made without light. The device was perfected by J. F. Peters, electrical engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. The shell fired by the German "Big Bertha" at Paris could travel but five thousandths of an inch in twenty-billionths of a second, not fast enough to make the movement visible in that space of time. In one fifty-millionth part of a second light travels twenty feet, although it could encircle the globe seven times in one second. The electrical photography device is called a klydonograph. It consists of a plateholder for ordinary plates, and is provided with electrical connections, so that disturbances may be brought into contact with the sensitized side of the plate. No light is needed. Electrical disturbances can photograph themselves. Little is known of the reason, but it appears to involve a principle somewhat similar to that involved in X-ray. "When surges occur in transmission lines they photograph themselves," Mr. Peters said. "I have never detected visible light in the camera while photographing a surge. Therefore, impulses must contain some property in themselves that affect the plate." "The instrument for taking photographs," continued Mr. Peters, "is the only practical device for obtaining data in regard to that type of line disturbance known as surges. Photographic plate now gives the characteristics of surges, thus giving engineers data with which to devise line protection. The device is applicable to transmission lines of all kinds and is connected to them by means of an electro-static potentiometer. "Surges last twenty-billionths of a second or possibly longer. The klydonograph can register them."

Takes the Temperature of the Deepest Seas

This flute-like affair, being admired by Lieut. D. E. Whelan of the coast survey ship Pioneer at Seattle, Wash., will take the temperature of the deepest seas and bring home a sample of the ocean water at the end of a five-mile wire.

Velocity of Radio Is Measured by Experts

Washington.—Measurements of the velocity of radio impulses were made here recently by experts of the Radio Corporation of America. Using a motion picture film device, a radio signal was recorded as making a circuit of 8,500 miles in 0.034 second between the corporation's sending station at New Brunswick, N. J., and Warsaw, Poland. A 14-tube receiving set, with which the timing device operated, caught the signal as it was sent from a key in the Radio Corporation's office in New York and again as it came back on a lower wave length from Warsaw. The photographic record was produced by an indicator attached to the receiving set and the time was measured by the distance between the photographic impressions on the film. A carefully calculated deduction was made for the slower wire transmission between the sending key and the broadening point on this side, and between the receiving and sending stations at Warsaw. With the wire transmission included, the lapse of time between the sending and return of the signal was figured at 0.130 second.

Old U. S. Fighting Ship Brings Cash to Wreckers

Manila.—The old monitor Monadnock, which was built some 30 years ago at San Francisco, is now being broken up for junk at a shipyard here. The craft was brought to Manila more than 20 years ago, but has never ventured far away from the Cavite naval station, where she was sold recently for $10,250 to a couple of Manila business men. They report they have sold enough of her equipment to cover the purchase price and that they have hardly scratched the old fighting ship.

WORDS OF WISE MEN

It is proverbially even to attempt a great activity.

A man should keep his friendships in constant repair.

He that laughs at me today may have one to laugh at him tomorrow.

Not our age, but what we accomplish, is the just measure of our length of life.

A person who harbors no resentment is usually safe in the harbor of contentment.

Every good deed that we do is not only a present pleasure, but a support for the future.

Life is a book of many wonders and should be found clean and wholesome in every man's library.

There are no incidents so unfortunate that skillful men will not draw from them some advantage.

If we were handed back all we had given and compelled to live on it for a time many would soon starve.

Never tell evil of a man. If you do not know it for certainty, then ask yourself, "Why should I tell it?"

Some people are more learned than wise. To be useful all learning must be blended with much common sense.

We all lower ourselves by our eagerness to grub up faults in other people's characters, writings, doings or religious opinions.

If we do not learn some things that are not in books, we shall fail, but if we do not learn some things in books, we shall not go far.

We would live in a vastly more congenial world if only we were looking among our fellow men for likenesses, instead of differences.

It is idleness that creates impossibilities, and where men care not to do a thing they shelter themselves under a persuasion that it cannot be done.

We need not be afraid that we shall go too far in serving others. There is no likelihood that any of us will become too bountiful, too kind, too helpful to his neighbor.

BUSINESS TIPS

Sorrows can enrich more deeply than success.

Life is like tennis in that the player who doesn't serve well usually loses in the end.

If your concern isn't being run well, are you doing anything to help to have it run better?

Cutting remarks about the bosses have cut more than one foolish employee loose from his job.

If you can't have things done your way, jump in and do your darnedest to get them done the other way.

"The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want." That conviction immovably anchored in the heart is worth no words nor figures can express it.

The man who cannot fill his heart with love for his fellow mortals may fill his pay envelope or his bank account to overflowing, but he still remains a pitiable bankrupt, a lamentable failure.

WE WONDER

Who recommends a grave-digger.

If an aviator's wife looks through the air pockets.

If you'd call the masculine equivalent of a flapper a flapjack.

If a ferryboat shoeshine ever lasts until the other shore is reached.

If petting parties weren't conceived by an enterprising hairnet manufacturer.

Why those 1,000 per cent dividend oil companies ever want to part with their stock.

How a man ever has room enough to get a coin out of his pocket, in a telephone booth.

When a Swiss cheese sandwich gets old enough to walk does it have a Swiss movement.

REINCARNATIONS

Napoleon as a traffic cop.

Croesus as a hat check boy.

Bluebeard as a divorce lawyer.

Jesse James as police commissioner.

Cleopatra as a cabaret cigarette girl.

Julius Caesar refusing a piece of coal three times.

Rip Van Winkle waiting for change from a taxi driver.

George Washington as a ferryboat captain on the Delaware river.

Big Increase in Phones

The increase in the number of telephones in the United States during 1921 was greater than the increase in the number of telephones in all the rest of the world combined.

Hair Glory

One minute a day gave it to me
By Edna Wallace Hopper

My hair is my greatest glory. It grows finer every year. I have never had falling hair or dandruff, never a touch of gray. Mine is a grandmother's age, yet countless girls who see me on the stage and elsewhere, envy my luxuriant hair.

So with mother. She died at the age of 57 with hair like mine today. So with my friends who use my method. They have beautiful hair, and it does not lose its color.

I am convinced that millions, in my way, can multiply the beauty of their hair. And I have arranged to bring that method to them.

A French formula

My mother and I, many years ago, found this formula in France. It had been developed by experts whose whole lives had been devoted to hair study.

One factor in it combats hardened oil and dandruff, the great enemies of hair. They stiffen the hair roots, check hair growth, choke the supply of pigment which gives hair its color. Other factors stimulate and fertilize the scalp. Hair thrives on such a scalp, as flowers will thrive in a clean and well-kept garden.

One minute a day

I call this formula my Hair Youth. I apply it daily with an eye dropper, directly to the scalp. Just enough to dampen the scalp. It takes but a moment, and this method does not muss the hair.

You have never known anything so effective, yet it is harmless. It does not affect the hair's color, natural or artificial. Its whole effect is on the scalp and the roots which lie therein.

My Hair Youth is sold under guarantee. If the first bottle fails to delight you, your dealer will return its price. So I ask you to try it at my risk. Learn what it does for your hair. Let it do what it did for me and mine, and you will reap rich rewards.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth is supplied by all druggists and toilet counters. Price, 50c and $1 with eye dropper. Also my Youth Cream, with two fruits in it. My Pearl Youth, my famous Tangle Remover. And my White Youth Clay—the last word in facial clay. My Beauty Book comes with each.

My Hair Youth will lead you to want my other helps, I think. And they are all now at your call. Edna Wallace Hopper, 550 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

SCOURGE ROUTS SETTLERS FROM SOUTH SEA ISLES

Elephantiasis Forces Whites to Seek Residence in Colder Climates to Effect Cure.

One of the perils that menace the settler in the South Sea Islands is the strange elephantiasis. This malady, which is prevalent on Tahiti and the neighboring islands, is an affection of the lymphatic system caused by the invasion of a microscopic worm called "filarii sanguinis."

There is a wide difference of opinion as to how the infection enters the system. Some investigators declare that the mosquito plays host to the worm until he enters the human body with the mosquito's attack thereon; others believe that the infection comes from drinking impure water, while the natives hold that the disease is contracted from walking in certain infected districts, through the pores of the feet, in much the same manner that hookworm invades the body.

Many Europeans who have settled in the various islands have contracted the disease. Indeed, on some islands every European resident suffers from it in a more or less advanced stage.

Elephantiasis takes the form of a chronic intermittent chill and fever, with inflammation and swelling of the lymphatics. With each attack a deposit of morbid lardaceous matter is left in the tissues of the arms and legs, and in time these become permanently deformed and of prodigious size.

The only treatment is residence in a cold climate. For this reason a goodly number of whites, who have settled in the islands during the last few years, and who do not know how to take care of themselves in the tropics, have been compelled to abandon their homes and go to a cold country for a prolonged sojourn.

Science Traces Many

Eye Diseases to Diet

Recent investigations, that are still going on, seem to show that the kind of food one eats has a direct etiologic relation to diseases of the eyes, and also those of the nose, throat and lungs, according to American Medicine.

This work has not yet been published, but during the last two years Dr. Amy Daniels, Dr. Margaret E. Armstrong and Dr. Mary Hutton of the department of nutrition in the University of Iowa, have made many studies of the lower animals, particularly rats, concerning the relation of prenatal feeding to rickets in children.

These investigators have been working with a vitamin, called Vitamin "A," which is soluble in fatty substances and is contained in many foods consumed by human beings. Between 400 and 500 animals were fed on this material, and they practically all developed snuffles, labored breathing and loss of appetite. Young animals would grow fairly well on this food for a couple of months, then become stationary and finally show a sudden drop in weight, health and strength.

If given soon enough, cod liver oil and butter oil would restore them to their former condition, but after a certain point was reached nothing would bring them back. On opening the skulls of such dead animals pus was found in the mastoid cells and in the nasal sinuses. Besides these signs, abscesses were found at the base of the tongue.

Russian Bandits Copy U. S. Wild West Holdup

Wild west days in the United States are having their Russian prototypes in certain thinly populated districts of the Ukraine and the Caucasus.

Within a fortnight were reported three train hold-ups by large groups of bandits. Near Rostov-on-Don between the stations of Jernovo and Stansikaya, a group of bandits robbed every passenger on one express train and killed one of them who resisted. Near Kharlov, where bandits stopped a train, armed guards opened fire and kept the bandits at bay until support arrived from the nearest station, but several passengers were wounded.

Near Vladivostok an armed group of 50 mounted bandits attacked the station, Soldatskaya, with the intent of robbing the rapidly approaching mail train. The engineer saw them, however, and passed the station at great speed.

Spain to Honor Memory of Explorer Menendez

John B. Stetson, Jr., has advised the Florida State Historical society that a celebration will be held in August in Aviles, Spain, the birthplace of Pedro Menendez, founder of St. Augustine, the oldest city in the United States.

According to the letter from Mr. Stetson, King Alfonso is expected to attend the celebration, and delegations have been invited from this country to represent both the state of Florida and the national government. The city of St. Augustine may send a separate delegation to the ceremonies.

The ancient dignity of "adelantado of Florida" was bestowed on Menendez by King Philip II. of Spain in 1565 in recognition of his explorations in the new world.

Berlin Flour Is Cheap

American women keeping house in Berlin assert that flour is virtually the only food which now retails for the same price as in pre-war days. Foods generally are 40 to 50 per cent higher than in 1914.

Orange From Asia

The sweet orange is a native of eastern Asia and was carried to India, Asia Minor, and the south of Europe along the Mediterranean. The early navigators of Portugal are supposed to have brought it home from India.—Nature Magazine.

Cotton Materials for Warm Weather

Many Charming Spring and Summer Fabrics Ready for Women's Wear.

Some of the spring and summer fabrics are most engaging, notes a fashion writer in the Portland Oregonian. Outside of the many silk crepes and lovely designs in knit materials there is a world of cotton materials that fairly sings spring and cool summer days.

Linen are more interesting than ever this year. The colors range from very dark browns and blues to light tans and lovely lavenders and the inevitable greens that are so much the thing worn. They make up nicely in tailored frocks with smart little round collars in contrasting colors and materials. Organdies and voiles may be used for a softer note.

In the gingham textiles there are patterns of plaid and stripes and checks. Stripes may be made up with the stripes making the main feature of the dress, having an up-and-down stripe in the blouse contradict a stripe that goes around in the skirt with such subtle design that one does not realize the sharp contrast.

In the crepes of the cotton class there are delicious imported ones that come in very delicate colors of rose, green, blue, lavender, yellow and gray. Small squares and triangles are formed in some of the crepes with the use of a silk or fiber thread that runs through the material.

Quite new and equally as pretty as new are the ratines. One of the most interesting is the ratine on a voile background. These may be had in large or small checks or stripes. Trimming may consist of the voile or ratine to match.

The sport ratine is a great favorite. In this one finds wide or more narrow bands or borders along one side of the material which makes up wonderfully effectively into whole dresses or skirts with the blouse of the plain. There is decided satisfaction in a dress of this nature.

If one wishes, there are the plain colors and also the heather ratines. Some are designed with dropped stitches to make the cross checks or bars of the nature of drawn work.

What of voiles and Swiss dotted materials? Well, they are more varied than ever and one can hardly draw themselves away from the rows and rows of attractive patterns and colors. These make up so nicely with plain voiles or lace.

Very dainty and demure are the Puritan prints that are ever new and fresh-looking. If for no other reason than to satisfy a longing for the dainty patterns and different colors and designs that may be worked up from this particular textile, one should have at least one or two dresses for street or house wear.

With all these to choose from and many more not mentioned there is ample room for original and distinctive choice of color and design.

White Pearl Buttons on Overb' use Suit

For street or afternoon wear, this smart black satin overblouse, trimmed and piped with white satin, is fastened with large white pearl buttons.

Winsome Accessories Appeal to All Women

With simplicity the rule, it follows that accessories loom large in importance and the woman of fashion selects every detail with rare discrimination.

Earrings have suddenly regained their prestige and are shown in a wide variety of new designs, most of which are quite long and of the filigree type set with semi-precious stones. Both powder blue, the new color, and a brilliant red called gypsy are a feature of costume jewelry.

The newest envelope bags have for ornaments of beads or brilliants which are attached to a tiny pocket just large enough to hold a gay chiffon handkerchief.

Makes Wire Stronger

By subjecting crystals of rock salt to high heat pressure just before they begin to decay a Russian scientist claims to have discovered a method for making wire stronger than steel from them.

Dear Sir:—

CAR THIEF DOING LARGE BUSINESS

Motorist of Today Needs Device That Will Puzzle Skilled Mechanic.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)
The automobile thief is doing a big business of late, and the police records show a large increase over that of last year. How, then, can the car manufacturer bring out a more or less standardized anti-theft contrivance that will really prevent a car from being stolen, and what would be the characteristics of this perfect lock?

The motorist of today needs badly a contrivance that can be locked or unlocked from the car seat by the driver, or else something that will automatically remind the driver of its existence before he starts the engine again.

Something to Confuse.

Something which merely prevents the engine from being started in the ordinary way is of absolutely no use. For example, if the self-starter is disconnected by the car owner, there would be nothing to stop two or three men from starting the engine by pushing the car with the gears in mesh. Why not give the thief constructive, rather than destructive work? Let him build up instead of tearing down. Destruction is much more simple than construction, and it can be done with most any tool. Any prisoner, given time and a saw, can eventually break jail, therefore, if the device will break a connection of some sort, perhaps something that would temporarily prevent the engine transmitting power to the differential, it would be more likely to confuse the thief than a mere locking device, which could easily be destroyed, and allow the car to be driven away. It isn't the fact of getting the better of a thief with only a few minutes' time in which to work out his getaway. It's got to be something that will puzzle the skilled mechanical thief, who has no longer time in which to accomplish his work.

Lock Gear in Neutral.

The majority of old-time motorist's suggestions seem to turn towards some device which will lock the gear in neutral, and, by the way, there are already numerous devices of this kind in existence, many of them operated with a Yale key. The keyhole is in reach of the driver, but in such a position as to make it awkward for the thief who tries to file off the device. But here again is a destructive rather than a constructive job, which brings us to where we started.

You, as a car owner, should take extra precautions if you go to unusual risks, in the way of leaving your car unattended. A few simple mechanical changes would help complicate the thief's job and, in many instances save your car.

Come on, you tinkering mechanics—set your ingenious brains to work on this most needed of automobile problems. There is big money for the man who succeeds in this venture.

Spark Lever Intended to Control Ignition Timer

The spark lever is for controlling the ignition timer or breaker which causes quick impulses of high tension current to pass through insulated wires to the sparkplugs. When the spark lever is retarded the timer is in a position where the contact points separate and send current to the plug just at or a little past beginning of power stroke of each piston. When spark lever is advanced the timer moves to a corresponding position, creating impulses before each piston reaches beginning of power stroke, when the engine develops more power and speed.

Piston Ring Guide

A steel ring just the diameter of the cylinder bore of one end and tapered off at the other until it is just large enough to slip over the piston ring makes it easy to get a piston back in the cylinder, obviating, as it does, catching of the rings.

Clean With Kerosene

Soap and water sometimes will not remove the grease spots and other marks on the running boards or the floor boards. The best way to clean these is with a rag saturated with kerosene.

The Sun and the Moon

The sun rises and sets on the moon just as it does on the earth, says Nature Magazine. However, the sun shines for about twenty-nine of our days on the moon, and then is below the horizon for an equal length of time.

Pathetic Road Pictures:

The man who left the jack handle at home.
Women who aren't good looking enough to attract Sir Ra-leighs to change tires for them.
The party who washes the new sedan with laundry soap and a "clean" rag.
Any car owner with an insured 1915 machine who sees a car thief pass along to the machine parked ahead.
Folks who come to the sales room ready to buy, but oblivious to the meaning of "C. O. D."
A driver whose rear-view mirror reveals the motorcycle officer on the trail.

Flashing Lighthouses to Protect Motorists

Light signals have protected travel on land and sea for many years. Colored flashing signals will be installed this spring on the main national highways at crossroads, sharp curves and railroad crossings. The motorist of tomorrow will be guided by traffic signals that will safeguard danger points and minimize accidents.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

No motor vehicle should be parked at the entrances to hotels, the offices, office buildings, large stores, and other buildings to which there is a great amount of coming and going.

The importance of efficient spark plugs cannot be estimated, says a well-known automobile engineer. Never wait until they miss fire and always buy the best quality obtainable.

Scale in the radiator can be overcome by mixing a little glycerin with the cooling water. The glycerin should be used in proportions of half a pint to each five gallons of water.

A slow leak in the tire valve plunger can be sometimes checked by applying a drop of oil in the valve stem. The oil partly dissolves the rubber and causes it to anneal itself to an airtight joint.

Water which comes from a chalky district should not be used in the water circulation system because this results in deposits in the pipe and radiator. Distilled or well filtered rain water should be used.

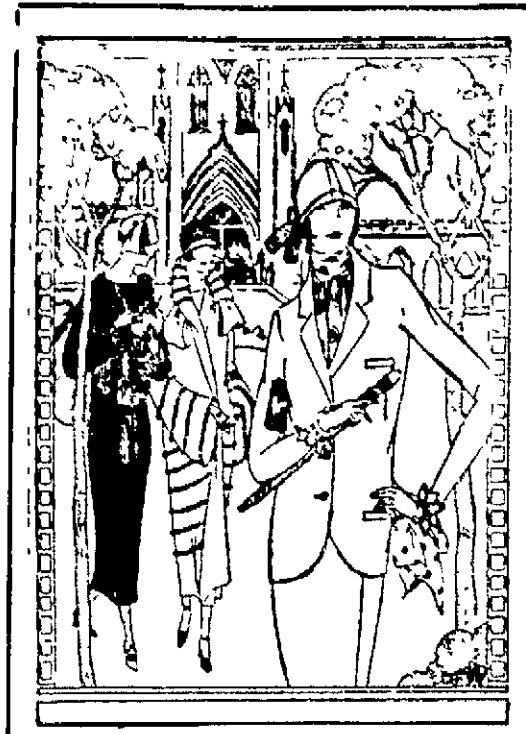

Care should be exercised when dry cells are used for ignition purposes to keep them in a dry place, for any dampness will cause them to short circuit, and when this takes place it will be hard work starting the engine.

It is often difficult to start by hand the small screws such as are used in the magneto, speedometer, etc. An easy way around this difficulty is to hold the screws between the legs of a pair of callipers, a drawing compass or even in the slot of an ordinary steel pen. The screw is then driven home by the small screwdriver. The same method may be used in replacing small nuts located inaccessibly.

Never Pick Oranges

Orange harvesting is done with clip-pers and the fruit is never pulled from the tree. The clipping prevents injury to the skin of the oranges. The pickers wear white cotton gloves as a further protection to the fruit.—Nature Magazine.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

A COYOTE MATE

It was all very well for people to talk of happiness, but they did not know as much about it as Mother Coyote.

In the first place there was her mate. He was so devoted. He stood guard outside the den—far enough from it so that he could mislead those who wanted to find out where it was.

He could get food for his family and he was so unselfish. No matter how tired he was he was always ready to help Mother Coyote and the babies.

Even when he had hurt himself at one time he did not think about that but only of how he could keep the little ones safe, and so keep Mother Coyote from worrying and fretting herself and making her dear little coyote self unhappy, as she would have done had harm befallen them.

Once they had had to move. It was all very well to love the old home den. They did not want to move.

They hated leaving the dear, familiar sights which they had grown to love.

They, too, loved their home. They did not want another.

They were not restless, nor anxious to move. It was a nuisance—especially when they had been so contented in the old home.

They were not anxious for change of view or anything of that sort.

They did not want a bigger place—they did not dream of a great palace home.

But they had had to move, as their home had been discovered—discovered by enemies—and they knew they would no longer be safe.

That was why they had moved. But it had not made Mr. Coyote cranky—even though he had had a slight accident in saving one of the children who had fallen in a stream where there was a rapid current.

He had hurt himself and tired himself all out in saving the child. There were four others, but the fifth was just as important and dear as any of them.

And it hadn't mattered how Mr. Coyote had felt himself. He had seen the look in Mother Coyote's eyes as she had scrambled after the others to keep anything like that from happening to them.

Yes, he had seen that look in her eyes and he had said to her with his eyes—for he needed all his strength to save the little one—

"I will save him for you, little Mother Coyote."

And he had.

Oh, yes, others could talk of happiness. Others could talk of riches.

Others could talk of travels and adventures and great experiences.

The coyotes, too, could talk of travels and of adventures and of great experiences.

They, too, could talk of happiness. They, too, could talk of riches.

For they had riches which were so wonderful—they had each other and a nice new den home which seemed to be perfectly safe.

Mother Coyote had no complaint to make. It was a beautiful world.

There were her five lovely babies.

And there was her mate, her coyote mate, who never thought of himself, but only of her and of the babies, dear, loyal, brave, plucky little coyotes that he was.

He was a coyote mate of whom any little coyote could be very, very proud.

BREAKFAST DISHES

A good dish of oatmeal is a breakfast in itself when properly cooked. Soak it overnight and then early in the morning put it on to cook in a double boiler set deep in boiling water. Keep this water boiling for two hours or more. Salt lightly, uncover and heat. When thus prepared and served with top milk, it is a vastly different dish from the cereal usually served as first course at the family table.

Popovers.—Beat two eggs well, add seven-eighths of a cupful of milk and one cupful of sifted flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Beat well and bake in deep granite popover pans until puffed and brown.

Another nice hot breakfast bread is: Oat and Cornmeal Muffins.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of shortening in one cupful of hot cooked oatmeal; add one teaspoonful of salt and one egg beaten light with three-fourths of a cupful of milk. Mix all thoroughly. Mix and sift together two cupfuls of cornmeal, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, and stir into the first mixture; bake in a hot oven in a well-greased muffin pan about twenty-five minutes.

Scrapie.—This old-fashioned breakfast dish is always one which will be welcomed. Prepare a stew of meat—a combination of pork and beef is good. Cook until tender. Save the broth and chop the meat. Cook cornmeal mush using the broth for part of the liquid, adding salt and pepper to season. When well cooked and ready to mold stir in the chopped meat and turn into a mold which has been rinsed in cold water. Small bread pans make nice slices. Slice when cold and fry in butter until well browned on both sides.

Tomato Toast.—Toast bread by browning in a dripping pan in the oven until hot. Butter well and pour over well-seasoned hot tomato. Tomato soup may be used if fresh or canned tomatoes are not at hand. Set in the oven until the tomato is all absorbed and serve very hot.

Many Buried Alive

On the theory that electrocution does not permanently kill all victims, Professor Jellinek, head of the Vienna Electro-Pathological Institute has recently started the medical and electrical world by announcing, that in his opinion, many victims of electrocutions have been buried alive. He maintains that electric shock only drives the victim into a trance and that hope of saving them should not be abandoned until physical decay starts. He believes that hundreds have been buried alive, whereas if they had been worked over for a day or more they would have been revived.

ANS NATIONAL INDIAN SOCIETY

Healthy Osage Redman to Organize Tribe.

The time is at hand for the creation of a society of American Indians which will embrace all the tribes of the continent," says S. J. Soldani of Osage, president of the recently organized Oklahoma Society of American Indians. "At the next meeting of the society, to be held in Tulsa in June, a constitution probably will be adopted that will nationalize the organization, and when that is done, we expect to start a campaign to spread the influence of the society into the wigwams of all the Indian tribes." The organization of this society is realizing the ambition of a century. In the councils of the Osage, he has been a power for a long time, and as a member of the first Oklahoma senate after statehood, he intervened between the white and the red men in legislation. American Indians never have had a together meeting," he says. "The are scattered all over the continents, many of them now mere remnants. While gradually most of them are being absorbed by the white race, they have yet a common cause. That was never more clearly demonstrated than when the Indian Rights association recently made its reports of wrongs that have been inflicted upon the red man.

To Welcome Wild Tribes.

"But the Indian Rights association is not familiar with all the needs of the Indian. Sometimes it does not know the basic requirements of the Indian. Nobody can know it like the Indian himself. Nobody can represent the Indian as well as an Indian. Consequently, hereafter we want Indians, well-informed Indians, to represent this society in all councils where the voice of the Indian should be heard.

"In many respects the cause of one tribe is the cause of all tribes, the interest of one Indian the interest of all Indians. We expect therefore, to open the doors of the society to the wild tribes as well as to the civilized tribes. The Indian who wears a red blanket will be as welcome as the Carlisle graduate or the rich quarter-blood.

"The organization is to be conducted for the physical, educational, social and industrial welfare of the Indian. We are going to keep out of politics. When it comes to a matter concerning the welfare of the tribes being at issue in politics, the association officials will recommend support of the man, regardless of his politics, who seems to them to have their cause at heart and can be of the greatest service to them."

Blanket Indians' Politics.

A majority of Oklahoma Indians are Democrats, he said. His own tribe, the Osage, is about 50-50 in politics. The blanket Indians of the western part of the state, who have not been interested in voting, although every one of them twenty-one years old has the right to vote, have been swung back and forth by leaders of both parties. If the Great White Father in Washington is a Republican, somehow the blanket Indian feels that he ought to vote the Republican ticket. The same feeling would obtain if a Democrat were president.

"There are over 300,000 Indians in the United States, Soldani says, and about 120,000 of them are in Oklahoma. This state is the home of more tribes and remnants of tribes than all other states combined.

"These 300,000 Indians, as a unit, have a right to be heard in the political, religious, social and economic councils of this country," he says, "and it is our purpose to see that that right is accorded them."

Officials of the society are cataloging all the American tribes. In due time a letter will reach every one of them, and every one will be invited to take part in the society's affairs. Soldani plans this year to visit personally as many of the tribes as he can in Oklahoma and New Mexico, and other Southwestern states. He is among the oil wealthy of the Osage and can afford to put his big car and driver into service as long as is necessary in this organization work. Doors of the society are open to intermarried citizens as well as Indians of blood, but probably the "squaw men" will not be allowed to hold office in the society.

Soldani approves of a suggestion made once by club women in Oklahoma that there should be established in Oklahoma the greatest Indian museum in the world. He says it is not unlikely that the society will seek public appropriations for that purpose, or contributions from the rich in the form of funds for building and equipping the museum and for endowment.

Liked to Scare Women

A respected carpenter by day and a terror to women at night, Joe Collins of Winfield, Kan., is in jail. He is held responsible for the many huggings which held the whole town in fright. "I never did any harm. I just liked to see the women frightened," Collins told police when arrested.

Oldest Microscope

The oldest microscope on record is a lens of quartz found among the ruins of Nineveh, which is now in the British museum. During the Middle Ages simple lenses were more and more used. A spectacle maker of Middleburg, Holland, was the first to build a compound microscope, which he constructed about 1580 for Charles Albert, archduke of Austria. Robert Hooke, secretary of the royal society, made various improvements.

Odd Employers

Varied are the idiosyncrasies of employment managers, those individuals who sometimes hire a man because they like the shape of his jaw or the color of his eyes. One employer has a plan which he thinks is unique. "I have two doors in my office," says he. "One is marked 'Pull' and the other 'Push.' When the interview is concluded and the applicant told to call the next day for final decision, only those who use the door marked 'Push' are considered."

Wall Built by Ancients

Recent discoveries at Cirencester, England, indicate that the ancient city wall hitherto believed to have been constructed by the Romans was built by pre-Roman tribes.

Leaflets on Stalks

The box-elder, or ash-leaved maple, is to be distinguished by its ash-like leaves of three to five leaflets on a single stalk, coarsely toothed and usually deep green, says the American Tree association of Washington, D. C. The bark on the trunk resembles that of the ash, and is light brownish gray, with narrow, shallow furrows. The young twigs are a light olive green.—Nature Magazine.

The Bulrushes

Opposite Cairo lies the island of Roda, where according to Arab tradition, Pharaoh's daughter found Moses in the bulrushes. At the southern extremity of this island is the Nilometer, by which the rise of the Nile has been measured by the rise of the Nile for 1,000 years. It is a square well with an octagonal pillar marked in cubits in the center.

Few Old-Time Seamen

With yards braced sharply to starboard an old-time barkentine lay in the harbor at Baltimore while her skipper scoured the waterfront for old-time seamen capable of handling a ship of her type. The seamen of the younger generation can handle a schooner, but a barkentine is different.

Tell him to take Cod Liver Oil for a couple of months and get enough good, healthy flesh on his bones to look like a real man.

Ask for McCloy Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Every druggist worthy the name sells them for 60 cents. Any man or woman can put on five pounds of healthy flesh in thirty days, or the money paid for the tablets will be refunded.

Postage Stamps

The history of postage stamps begins with the issues made by Great Britain in 1540 under the postoffice administration of Sir Rowland Hill. Their immediate success resulted in the adoption of the same device by other countries, including the United States, before 1850.

POOR PUTTS DUE TO
FLAW IN GOLF BALLWashington Doctor Finds
Centers Not Round.

A physician in Washington has made the discovery that poor putting is not always due to a faulty stroke but to the fact that the centers of golf balls are not always round. His experiment was made carefully. He put several balls on the green and in many instances the golf ball rolled straight for the cup only to roll on one side or the other just as it was about to drop.

While this change in the course of the ball at the very end of its run could be traced to more than one mis take in his stroke or to some defect in the turf, the putts were tried often enough to convince the player that the fault might be with the ball.

He made several X ray photographs of the golf balls and found that the centers in several of the balls were not round.

He discovered an alibi that golfers have been searching for. A new alibi is always welcome in golf. In nine golf balls with which the experiment was made only one had a perfectly round center.

The only trouble with a discovery of this kind is that every time a golfer misses a putt he will immediately tell his opponent that the center isn't round. An X ray outfit may become a part of the golfer's equipment.

It is known that he is negotiating for a ball club in the Pacific coast league, and if he is successful will give up "big time" and devote himself to managing the team and taking his turn on the mound.

Effective Southpaws

Are Quite Rare Now

Where are the left-handers of yesterday? Where are chaps like Nap Rucker, Rube Waddell, Doc White, Eddie Plank, Jesse Tannehill and so on?

Up and down the list of major league southpaws today chaps of the caliber of some of these old timers are few and even farther between. Rucker, with a chronic second division ball club—Brooklyn—hurled winning stuff season after season. Waddell, when right, was invincible; Doc White was an enigma most of the time. Plank and Tannehill were just as good. And there were many others, too.

Surely there is a shortage of left-handed fingers nowadays.

Keeps Old Law

Maryland is the only state in the Union which still requires a religious ceremony for marriage. Other states are satisfied with a civil ceremony. Maryland, together with Virginia, Kentucky, Louisiana and Mississippi, permit marriage of a girl at twelve years of age, while New Hampshire makes the age thirteen years.

Curious Fish

There is a curious fish called the remora, which is one of the largest creatures in the world. On the top of its head is a powerful sucker, the underside of which it attaches to the underside of other fish or even to the hulls of boats. In this way it makes for itself a means of traveling without moving a fin.

Small Boy Wins Long Battle With an Eagle

SUFFER, N. Y.—Fred Kilpatrick, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kilpatrick, living at the foot of the Ramapo hills, near here, was attacked recently by a large eagle. In the battle the boy's clothes were badly torn and his face severely scratched. After a fight of nearly half an hour the eagle flew away.

GIRL HELD CAPTIVE IN CAVE BY 5 MEN

Child Forced to Work and Remain Underground.

Battle Creek, Mich.—Eight prisoners in a cave, where she was forced to prepare meals and do housework for five men who kidnaped her last July, Edith Hartsuff, eleven years old, has been rescued by the police of this city. Two of the five men are under arrest, and police are seeking the other three. Edith, an orphan, lived in a child's home until a year ago, when she was adopted by a family named Dowd. One day last July the Dowds placed the child in a motor bus which carried her to Battle Creek, where she was met by one of the men and taken to the cave.

Police recently were informed of the cave and the strange beings who lived in it. They made a raid. As a result they rescued the girl and arrested Frank Tins, sixty-four years old, and Ed Linsberger, twenty-five years old. Tins, who is declared to be a relative of the Dowds, is the man who met the girl in Battle Creek, she told police.

The cave in which the girl was kept prisoner is large and fitted up like a real home. It is lined with beds and contains crude furniture and a small stove. A large stack of food and other staples was found stored in the cave, according to the police. The little girl was not permitted to leave the place, she said.

But That Would Have

Won Him $1,900 Seized

New Orleans.—M. L. (Dixie) Esparro, employee of an electrical construction company, is in hard luck. He visited the race track recently with a hot tip and $380 and was making his way through the crowd to place a bet when he was intercepted by Deputy Sheriff Stakelum with a warrant charging forgery.

"Let me make one bet on this race," yelled Esparro, casting a frantic glance toward where the bookies were offering five to one against John T. D. "I've got a straight tip," he urged. "I want to put $380 on his nose."

The deputy took the $380. A few minutes later John T. D. passed under the wire a winner and the bookies were saved $1,900.

Esparro was arrested on affidavits sworn out by the president of the company employing him, charging he had forged two checks amounting to $380. He was released on bond.

Actress Falls Dead on

Stage While Singing

New York.—Beatrice Shaw, pretty twenty-seven-year-old vaudeville actress, fell dead on the stage at the international exposition in the Seventh regiment armory here while singing. She, her sister, Mildred, and Miss Helen Leopold comprised the vocal team known as the "Three Treasures."

The audience of some 1,500 persons thought her fall a part of the act until her sister and Miss Leopold rushed to the stricken young woman's side. Then the curtain was abruptly rung down.

A few minutes before she collapsed Miss Shaw was photographed in the act of kissing a newspaper reporter in a demonstration of a lip rouge.

Police Headquarters

Lock Its Doors Now

Brooklyn, N. Y.—They locked the front door of Brooklyn police headquarters recently for the first time in 12 years and hereafter the entrance is to be closed nightly from 5 p. m. to 8 a. m. A city locksmith called and repaired the lock, for the door had not been turned since the building was opened in 1912.

The official explanation was that the door was closed to save the services of two doormen. Unofficial explanations for barring the way, except through the Poplar Street station, where the desk lieutenant can scrutinize callers, were that it was to shut out lawyers' runners and fire insurance adjusters, known as "ambulance chasers" and "fire bugs."

Comedian Returns From

Entertainment to Die

Winsted, Conn.—Wilbur H. Bradford, fifty-six, unmarried, who took a leading role at a church social in the Y. M. C. A. and made scores of laughs, was found dead in bed at his boarding house, a suicide from inhaling illuminating gas.

A note was found with his will, naming former United States Marshal C. C. Middlebrooks, executor, saying: "I can't stand this insomnia much longer."

Moat

The moat was a wingless bird found in New Zealand, somewhat like an ostrich in appearance. It varied from the size of a turkey to birds 12 feet in height. They were edible and their extermination more than 500 years ago is probably due to that fact.

Enhancing and Preserving the Beauty of the Home

The East Room or State Parlor has all the grandeur and elaboration of the Italian Renaissance with its three massive, scintillating chandeliers and four gleaming mirrors. The highly ornate ceiling and walls are painted cream and gold and the parquet oak floor is finished with varnish.

Intimate Glimpses Within the White House --Home of the First Lady of the Land

The Blue Guest Room with its four-posted bed, so beautifully preserved with paint and varnish, extends a potent suggestion of the romance and picturesqueness of old Colonial days. In truth, the whole room breathes the warm hospitality accorded the distinguished guests of the world's greatest nation.

Color harmony reflected in the Breakfast room: Here Chippendale chairs are a distinctive feature of the room and are enhanced by the background of warm buff-colored walls with their stately paneling and decoration. The large mirror over the mantel reflects in strange and interesting manner the delicate stucco ceiling and the unusual cornice.

WHEN you have read about Mrs. Coolidge entertaining distinguished guests, or of a dinner given by the President to members of the Supreme Court, or perhaps, an account of the splendors of a social function, have you wondered how the rooms of the White House are decorated?

It is only by invitation that one sees these rooms where lives the first lady of the land. A visitor may cross the corridors and penetrate as far as the East Room but here the mistress of the White House draws a curtain, screening the private life of the presidential household.

The White House is perhaps the foremost home in the land. Within its walls the guests of the world's greatest nation are welcomed. To the decoration of its rooms, therefore, more than ordinary interest attaches.

The prevailing characteristic of the executive mansion is stately simplicity. Paint, enamel and varnish are used everywhere. Well selected colors and skillful use of panels and stipling have produced a series of interiors that are literally "fit for a king". It is the custom to redecorate the White House according to the wishes of each incoming president.

The White House has a spacious, modern kitchen, the walls and ceiling of which are done in a white, washable paint. All woodwork is in ivory enamel. The pantries are finished in the same manner.

Basement corridors, billiard room and plank and rest rooms have ceilings done in light ivory, walls of colonial yellow and woodwork white enameled.

Broad stairs lead up to the main corridor which is done in old ivory with pale buff side walls. The East room or State parlor, 52 feet long and 40 feet wide, with four beautifully carved mantels surmounted by mirrors and three massive crystal chandeliers, has ceiling and walls of cream and gold, handsomely paneled. Woodwork is in ivory, the parquet oak floor is varnished. The draperies are of old gold. The decorations typify the spirit of the Italian Renaissance.

Bedroom used by Helen Taft: This room is adequately expressive of the wholesome simplicity so typically American. Cheer, light and comfort are reflected in the high, painted ceiling, the restful expanse of wall space painted a neutral shade and the low, comfortable furniture so invitingly placed.

Walls of the Green Room, the next room toward the west, are of green velvet, with beautifully proportioned paneled wainscot, the moldings of which are gilded against an ivory enameled background. Before the mantel is a screen of old Gobelin tapestry in a frame of gold, surmounted by a spread eagle. A very beautiful lacquer cabinet, a gift from Japan, is also in this room.

The oval Blue Room is the President's reception room. Walls are covered with rich blue corded silk with a border stencil in gold just above the wainscot. The hangings are blue with golden stars in the upper folds. The white painted furniture, including the grand piano, is Empire. Lincoln used to stand in the deep casements of this room, looking across the Potomac at the Virginia hills, when his cabinet officers left him to battle alone with the grave problems of his day.

Against the rich red velvet walls of the Red Room hangs the Lansdown Stuart portrait of Washington which Dolly Madison carried across the Potomac to safety when the White House was burned and pillaged in 1814. All these rooms have varnished oak floors and white enameled woodwork, with mahogany doors, varnished and rubbed.

Next in order comes the State dining room, with cream ceiling, and walls paneled in dark English oak. The massive mahogany table will seat 100 guests. White House china numbers more than 1,500 pieces and is exquisitely painted with native fruits, flowers and game. On the north end hangs a beautiful tapestry said to be 400 years old. These rooms, excepting the private dining room, are for the official life of the president.

ident.

The private dining room is charming in its simplicity, yet dignified by a delicate cornice, the groined ceiling and the modeled plaster eagle over the mantel. The warm buff walls are paneled above a carved chair rail. Woodwork is ivory. Chippendale chairs are a feature of this room.

A chummy, comfortable room is the president's study, with its long rows of built-in bookshelves, leather furniture and student lamp. Here again paint has been used on walls and ceiling, forming an ideal background for the art treasures displayed in this room.

All bedrooms on the second floor are painted, ceilings being cream, while the paneled walls are done in buff, light chocolate color, putty color and grays, with panel moldings and woodwork in ivory. All have a stippled finish. Dressing and bath rooms follow the same style. Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge occupy rooms at the west end of the White House.

In all there are 54 rooms in the White House, the third story and attic being used for storage purposes. One looking at the interior could not but say the United States Government believes in saving the surface with paint, for the rooms are kept spotlessly beautiful and perfectly preserved by means of paint, varnish and enamel.

The exterior painting of the executive mansion is of just as much concern to the officers in charge as the interior decoration, for outside surfaces would soon look unsightly and begin to decay unless given paint protection. The White House was the first public building erected in Washington, the corner stone being laid by Washington in 1792. It was not completed until 1800. John Adams and Mrs. Abigail Adams occupied it before all the windows were in place. History tells us Abigail Adams complained of the unfinished condition. She was compelled to hang her clothes in the unfinished East Room, as she had no fenced-in yard which she could use with safety.

The building is well back from Pennsylvania Avenue in beautifully landscaped grounds that extend from the Treasury Building to the State, War and Navy Building. It is constructed of a free-stone quarried in Virginia. This was floated up the Potomac on barges and hauled by ox-teams.

Since the White House was burned, the outside stone walls blackened by fire, have been painted white. The metal roof is green and the iron railings black.

There are about 100,000 square feet of outside surface to be painted on the White House. Ordinarily this is given two coats every two years. During the war painting was delayed and portions of the building fell into such bad shape that 15,000 square feet had to be burned off with a gasoline torch. To paint the building inside and out would take 40 men three months.

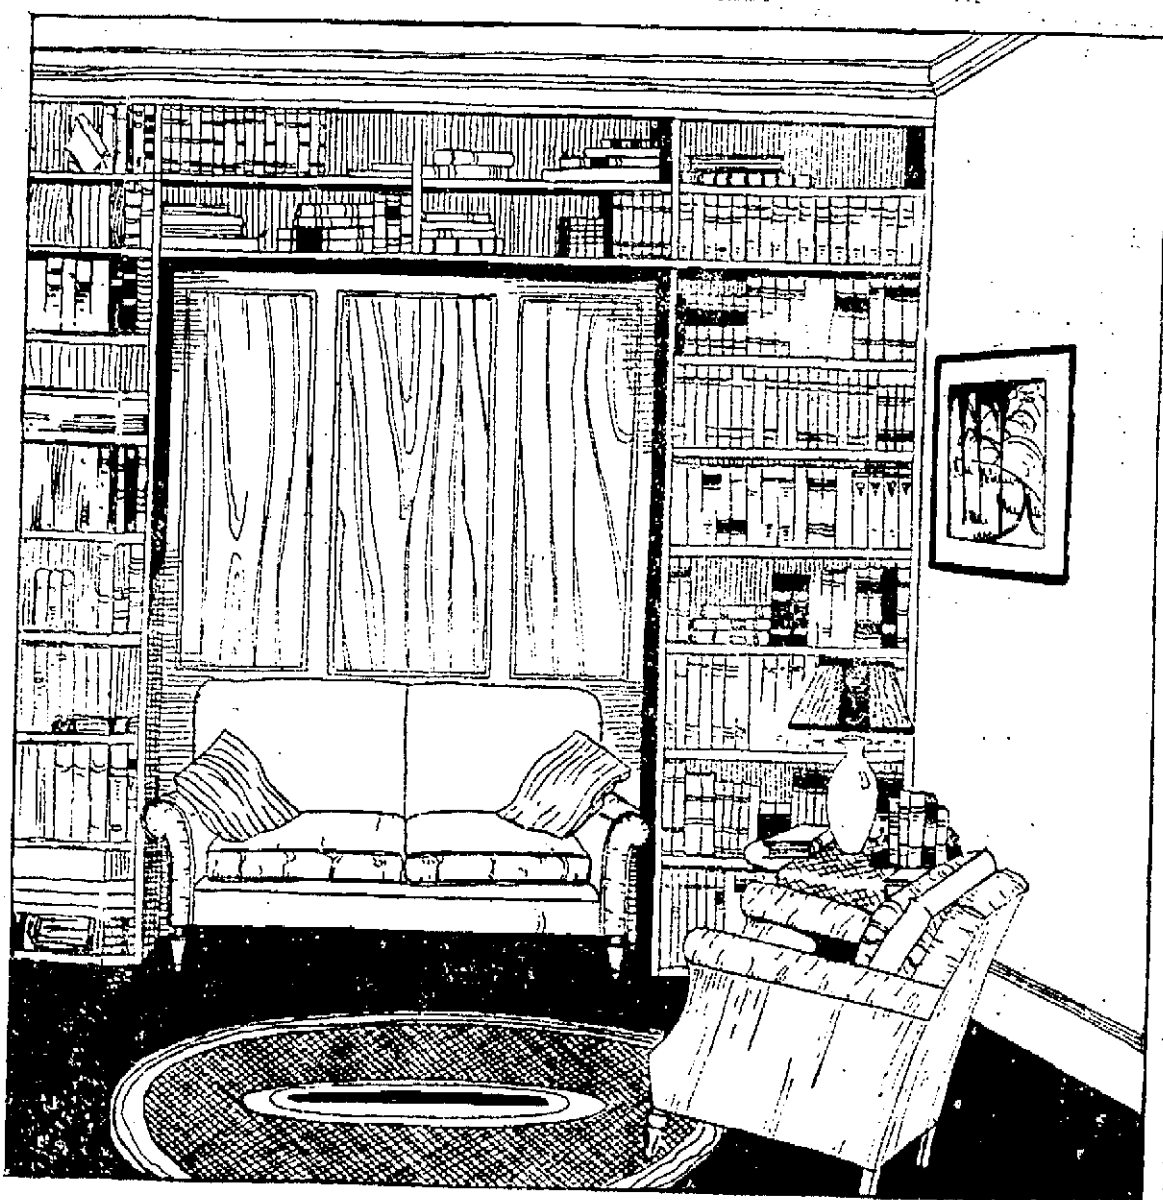

The painting of the White House is an event of more than ordinary interest. It is the building where in the elected representative of the people has contact with the history of the earth. That the national building be preserved is a matter of national importance and every citizen takes pride in its appearance. It is an outstanding example of the value of paint and varnish.

The Painted Beauty of the Grocery Tin

Painted containers help to emphasize that spirit of freshness and cleanliness found in the modern painted kitchen. Old containers, coffee-tins and biscuit-tins are veritably transformed by paint. Gay motifs, cut from cretonne are glued on as delightful notes of color. A coat of varnish applied to the entire surface will preserve the color of the cretonne and give a glossy washable finish.

THE CHARM OF BUILT-IN BOOKSHELVES

The most intriguing corner of the room is that in which the books stand in friendly rows. Here built-in bookshelves, aside from their friendliness, stability and decorative quality become an integral part of the home when finished to harmonize with the walls and woodwork. The inner surfaces of the shelves and the purpose of filling space, if the number of volumes is not quite sufficient. Harmoniously stained and varnished wooden wall panels form the background for the action.

Painted Flower Pots

A group of plants on the deep sill of a window gives a glow of beauty to the room. If the pots and jardinières containing them have a fresh coat of paint and a stencilled motif or border to decorate them. Sometimes glued-on motifs of paper or cretonne and a coat of varnish over all adds a note of charm.

Close of Miss Marsh's Address

Through an accident, the following paragraphs were omitted from the last part of Miss Marsh's address to the Y. W. C. A. girls on Wednesday evening.

Miss Marsh had asked the question, "What does the spiritual life mean to us?" It should be the biggest thing in life. God said to Moses, "I will make them a kingdom of priests," and this blessing may be ours if we take it. It offers the only sure control of life. We are told that Christ grew in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man, and that is what we should do. Our bodies are made of the dust of the ground, and then God breathed into our nostrils the breath of life, a part of Himself. And the only way to increase that spiritual life is by having God breathe Himself into us again and again and yet again. The body grows by taking food; by exercise and by sleep. These three things re-develop the body so that at the end of seven years all of our bodies of today have been entirely recreated. That is true whether we believe it or not. Our minds grow by the study of books and of people. But our souls can grow only by God for they are God. There are three ways in which God helps us to grow in our souls. By His written and spoken word, for God speaks to us as surely as he did to men of old. He helps us through prayer. The troubled saint of the child cries out to the Great Spirit, our Father. Prayer does not always result in our getting what we ask for, but it does give us the quiet assurance that we will receive what is for our best good. It gives us peace and joy and the strength to ride over life without being afraid of it.

And then there is worship. Miss Marsh said she almost envied those whose church kept the beautiful Lenten season ending now so soon in Passion and Holy week and then the inexpressible joy of Easter. Nothing that comes into our lives can ever take the place of worship in the church of synagogues of our choice. It is a vital privilege. Radio won't take the place of worship in God's house, where in silence or service we reach out and touch God. There is no substitute for such worship. St. Paul thought that he had control of his life until the great light of the Saviour of the world shined upon him that he was going wrong, and he turned about. When on trial he exclaimed, in telling of this experience, "And I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. It is not often that a great vision comes to us as we walk along the streets as it did to St. Paul. For us the vision comes more often when we are alone with the Great Spirit which is the essence of our little spirit. It is true for us today as when written, 'I can do all things through God that strengthens me,' giving us the complete control of our lives, which can be just what we will to make them.

14 Are Held as Counterfeiters

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, April 11.—Eleven men, two women and a three-year-old girl were in Raymond street jail, Brooklyn, today, charged with being implicated in a counterfeiting conspiracy by government agents who captured them in raids at New Britain and New Haven, Conn., and at Dayport, L. I.

Four of the men, the woman and the child were taken in the raid at Dayport by secret service agents who said they had seized a complete counterfeiting outfit and $40,000 in $20 banknotes that had been raised from bills of one dollar denomination.

While the raid was underway by pre-arrangement made in Washington, five other men were arrested here, one in New Britain and one in New Haven. Three of the prisoners gave their names as Jacob Winkler, New Britain; Fortunato Cianfour, West Haven, Conn.; and Mercer Pomeroy, Hamford, Conn.

According to Suffolk county authorities, who participated in the Dayport raid, discovery of the conspiracy came about when banknotes alleged to have been converted by the band were used in the purchase of contraband liquor from Long Island bootleggers and rum runners. It was said that since the gang obtained possession of the Rayport house last February more than $100,000 in spurious $20 notes had been circulated.

HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

Washed With Sulphur It Darkens Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, faded and faded hair is grand. Sage's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage. However, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering sage and the messy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the sage-tea product, improved by the addition of other ingredients. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your hair or a soft brush with it, and run this through your hair, taking a small strand at a time, by running the gray hair disappears. What delights the ladies with Sage's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

Competent Guide

A group of motorists from Washington got lost in Druid Hill park in Baltimore. They were trying to make the Pimlico racetrack, which is situated just on the edge of the Maryland metropolis. So they hailed a policeman.

"Can you tell us how to get to the racetrack?"

The officer was deliberate in his reply. "Do you see that gent on the corner," he asked, "the one with the seedy suit, the form about sticking out of his pocket, and his shoes run down at the heel?"

"Yes, we see him."

"Follow him."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CHILDREN CHOKE
WILDCAT TO DEATH
IN DISMAL SWAMPBrother and Sister Have Thrilling Experience Returning From School.

Newberry, Mich.—Desolation—such as may be found in the forbidding swamps of Luce county at sundown may key one's imagination to the experience of two school students, Frank and Lillian Halstead, children of a homesteader.

To them this swampland, with its shadows and sudden darkness, is but the lair of the last of Michigan's wild animals—animals to whom the primal law is paramount and who know no other. They have encountered such, in this instance, a wildcat, and the story harkens somewhat of wolf tales and of lone travelers being dogged for miles by packs to be eventually pulled down and slain.

Attacked by Wildcat.

It was but recently that the story of these two children was brought down from the North woods. They had, it is said, been on their way from school, and, being overtaken by the sudden winter twilight, pressed toward home with apprehension that was only the more intense because of the recent depredations of wildcats—animals which have evidenced more boldness during the last few months than in recent years.

It was while hurrying forward that they were stopped in their path by a crouching figure, only half distinguishable in the dusk—a grim creature snarling softly and lying close to the ground. Unable to move out of its path, where it was devouring some fresh prey, Frank Halstead attempted to frighten the creature away, but was attacked.

In the struggle which followed he was badly clawed and bitten, but his sister, availing herself of a bookstrap, succeeded in forcing it about the animal's throat as her brother held it. The wildcat was then flung into the brush, where it frantically fought to free itself.

Body of Wildcat Found.

Not waiting to see the outcome of the struggle, the two children hurried through the swamp to their home. It was found next day that the animal had struggled free of the strap and dragged itself away. The body was found later, revealing, however, few marks of the struggle.

Since the encounter of the two children hunters have tracked the animals relentlessly and the broods seem to have been scattered.

Bootleggers Use Gas,
Torpedoes to Foil Cops

New York.—Prohibition agents attacking a bootlegger's establishment recently were met by torpedoes, gas and water defense but emerged as triumphant captors of a $50,000 redistilling apparatus, the daily output of which was estimated at 20,000 gallons. The operatives escaped.

Throwing front and rear doors open simultaneously, the raiders were met by a detonation; they drew their pistols, thinking they were fired upon. Investigation revealed that the "shots" came from railroad torpedoes fastened to the doors to warn the workers that some one was coming and to give them time to get away.

Proceeding, the party was met by a gas attack. The gas man was summoned and discovered that the leak came from a main which the bootleggers had tapped and used illicitly for their operations.

The quarry had escaped. The torpedoes had answered their purpose.

Somber Hearses to Be
Disguised as Limousines

New York.—Enough gloom prevails in the world without somber hearses passing through the streets to remind people of death, in the opinion of the Associated Undertakers of New York, who recently voted to disguise their hearses as ordinary limousines. The association last year eliminated black gloves at funerals and voted to make its mortuary establishments bright and attractive.

Feed for 5,000 People
Roasted by Electricity

A new and unusual application of electric heating was made recently when electrically barbecued beef was served to five thousand people at the annual round up and celebration at Great Falls, Washington. We learn from the National World that four steers weighing about two thousand pounds each were dressed and prepared for barbecue and roasted in a large electrically-heated pit built especially for the occasion. The improvised oven was 82 feet long, 4 feet wide and 12 feet deep. Twelve heating elements of 3 kilowatt capacity and consuming about 150 feet of No. 14 iron wire were placed one foot above the bottom of the pit. Sheet-iron heat deflectors were placed one foot above the heating elements, and a foot and half above the deflectors were placed iron bars to hold the beef. Automatic control was provided to maintain an even heat in the pit. The meat was first roasted at a temperature of 350 degrees for two hours, and then reduced to 250 degrees and maintained at this point for four hours. For the next six hours the temperature ranged from 250 degrees to 300 degrees. At midnight the meat had been roasting for twelve hours, and the temperature was then reduced to 200 degrees and held there for twelve hours until the time of the barbecue.

Albumen From the Lupin
Seed Makes Good Food

Not only in the Mediterranean region, but also along the western coast of America there grow freely tall, handsome spikes of blue-white or yellow flowers that form entrancing bits of color in the landscape during the season for blossoming, and are not infrequently used as a garden flower. It is the lupin, which belongs to the family of leguminous vegetables to which mankind owes so much, and which includes beans and peas as well as peanuts.

As in other members of the family the fruit of the lupin consists of seed-bearing pods, but no attention has been made to use them either for age or for human food until recently. It is now announced that by a German process, the Pohl method of extraction, said to be quite inexpensive, the seeds can be made to yield an uncommonly high percentage of albumen, which, added to rye or other flour, makes an extremely nutritious food.

This new bread is likewise admirably fitted to form part of a diet, certainly (presumably diabetic) patients because of the small amount of starch it contains.—Literary Digest.

Early Cotton Planting

The history of cotton production in the United States is the history of millions of people. It is the story of pioneers who fought savages, fought savages tribes, and laid out plantations. Fourteen years after the colonists settled at Jamestown, cotton was planted at Newport News.—Nature Magazine.

STOUT AND VAN BRAMER
SIGN WITH ALL STARS

Manager McCordie of the All Stars has signed up Freddie Stout and Vince Van Brumer for the coming season. He is after several more local players and expects to have the rest signed up within the next few weeks. Stout, the lanky portlander from South Roundout, was the pitching ace of the All Stars last season. He pitched in ten games, winning seven against some of the best semi-pro clubs. This season with the help of several youngsters, Manager McCordie says the local club will be a hard outfit to trim.

Van Brumer, a young player, who played with the high school in 1920-21, held down the initial sack last season, besides being captain. He was lead-off man, usually making good, and batting .302. With another sea## son's playing Van is expected to rank as one of the best first sackers in this section.

Italian Heavy Needs to Learn the Ropes

Ermilio Spalla, Italian heavyweight, will need a guardian when he hits New York—the land of wise boxing promoters and managers—judging by the Roman gladiator's deals so far. Ermilio turned down an offer of about $15,000 to meet Gene Tunney, light heavyweight champ. Then he signed up for a bout in Argentina with Luis Firpo, and Mr. Firpo booked him on a proposition which will net Ermilio about $4,000.

HIGH OR LOW BALL WAS ALL THE SAME

Buffington Fooled Batters With His Big Drop.

In the early eighties the batsmen had the privilege of calling for a high or low ball when at bat. The high ball had to pass the zone from the neck to the waistline. The low ball from the belt to the knees. The hurler who possessed a good drop ball was getting by with wonderful results. In the days of the 50-foot pitching distance the down shoot was much more effective than it is today for the reason that it didn't break until right on top of the batsman, so the man at bat could not tell much about the height it would pass the plate.

Charles Buffington, with the Boston and Philadelphia clubs from 1883 until 1893, was considered one of the high-class hurlers. Buffington had a drop ball that was a beauty and when he had it working right it was practically unhittable. Buff was tall and his height enabled him to start this delivery high and it would sweep down on the unsuspecting batsman like a kingfisher diving after a trout. Buffington pitched the ball with a high overhead swing and in its course toward the plate it would look to the batsman like a high ball, the kind he called for. Its deceptive nature fooled him into swinging and he invariably would miss the ball by a foot.

The batsman who called for a low ball would gaze at the evident high one started by Buff and let his bat settle over his shoulder, when the ball would suddenly duck down and pass over the plate at the height called for.

In 1884, while pitching for the Boston club, Buffington fanned 402 batsmen, which is the record for the National league for a season. In a nine-inning game against Cleveland, played in 1884, the big hurler fanned 17 men, which is the second best record in major league baseball.
